To whom it may concern:

I have known Keith Bookwalter for over two decades. He and I share a common intellectual root through the genius, Daniel C. Jordan. Jordan's vision and model of education for human beings represented a coherent, philosophically, psychologically, and spiritually honest and rational model of education. Keith and I have shared Jordan's influence through private meetings, mentoring, and publication. Keith's determined effort to take Jordan's teaching forward to several educational venues has been most admirable. I think that his tenacity, his openness to several lines of inquiry, and his experience in Latin America are assets that would be welcomed by most schools and educational institutions.

Keith's WES model of education should be seen as indicative of the kind of thought and attention to detail of which Keith is constantly capable. That statement is not a recommendation to possible employers to adopt but rather as evidence of Keith's ability to work hard and thoughtfully. I recommend Keith Bookwalter as a person any employer should interview and seriously consider employing as a professional educator.
